

Photolibrary goes Press

London – March 2010:

Photolibrary, the world's leading independent producer and distributor of stock images, footage and music is excited to announce its exclusive representation of a brand new press collection. Presseselect is a dynamic, specially edited collection of several hundred thousand images which offers media clients a massive range of news, celebrity and entertainment, historical and travel photography. With images of the world's politicians to Hollywood stars to historical news events, this collection will appeal to all. This is Photolibrary's first foray into the world of press and continues the group's strategy of providing the picture buying community with easy access, striking imagery and unbeatable service across an ever-growing subject range that straddles the unique and the everyday.

Glenn Parker, Photolibrary Group CEO commented: "the representation of Presseselect, now available on www.photolibrary.com, cements Photolibrary's position as the leading independent go-to destination for the world's picture buyers whether they are commercial or editorial in focus. We have carefully edited this collection to provide a good array of material without the clutter of too many similar style images. The collection commences our drive into the editorial and press area of the stock image market."
